George W. Price represents businesses and individuals in a wide range of complex business litigation matters in state and federal courts nationwide. He has significant experience in law enforcement and investigations, having served as a police officer, Senior Special Agent with the DEA, and Special Assistant District Attorney with the Middlesex County District Attorney's Office. George brings to bear this background to represent publicly traded companies, as well as individuals and corporate officers and directors, in a variety of disputes and special investigations.

His experience spans diverse matters involving breaches of fiduciary duty, conversion, theft of trade secrets, unfair and deceptive business practices, mergers and acquisitions, improper valuation, partnerships, professional negligence, insurance, environmental pollution, real estate, employment matters, defamation, civil rights, and trust disputes.

Prior to obtaining his law degree, George was a Senior Special Agent with the DEA serving in both the Boston and Atlanta Field Divisions for over six years. George was the primary case agent in several of the most significant criminal cases brought by the Department of Justice. Prior to joining the DEA, George worked as an investigator for a Massachusetts corporation that handles criminal investigations for private businesses, and as a research analyst and police officer for the Boston Police Department.
