John Morrier works with troubled companies and their owners in business restructuring matters, both court-supervised and out of court, and advises clients in buying and selling assets in distress situations.

Both a litigator and a deal lawyer, John has extensive experience in all aspects of bankruptcy and commercial law, including litigation in federal and state courts and structuring and documenting complex transactions. He represents debtors, receivers and bankruptcy estate professionals, secured and unsecured creditors, executives, insurers, landlords, and other parties in state and federal court receiverships and bankruptcy proceedings as well as out of court restructurings, workouts and other insolvency matters. He regularly advises directors and officers in their duties in solvency-challenged situations.

John has worked with clients to develop and execute business strategy in a broad array of industries, including companies and nonprofit organizations in the real estate, technology, education, healthcare, biotechnology, cannabis, retail, manufacturing, finance and professional services fields.
